PREFACE

HOW CINAHL BEGAN

Although nursing journal publishing began around the turn of the century, until 1961 there was no easy way to identify current articles in the growing number of journals in the field. Three hospital librarians who were indexing the literature for their own nursing staffs decided to pool their efforts to publish one standardized publication. In 1961, Mildred Grandbois, library director of the Glendale Adventist Medical Center, Glendale, California, published the first edition of the CUMULATIVE INDEX TO NURSING LITERATURE (CINL), containing indexing for 1956-1960 from 16 journals.

CINAHL TODAY

The CUMULATIVE INDEX TO NURSING & ALLIED HEALTH LITERATURE (CINAHL) is a comprehensive and authoritative index to periodical literature in English for nurses, allied health professionals, medical librarians, and others interested in health care issues. Over 330 nursing, allied health, and biomedical journals are regularly reviewed and indexed for inclusion in each year's five bimonthly issues and cumulative bound volume. Virtually every English-language nursing journal is indexed along with publications of such organizations as the American Nurses' Association and the National League for Nursing. Primary journals in thirteen allied health fields are also indexed:

- Cardiopulmonary Technology
- Emergency Services
- Health Education
- Medical/Laboratory Technology
- The Medical Assistant
- Medical Records
- Occupational Therapy
- Physical Therapy
- The Physician's Assistant
- Radiologic Technology
- Respiratory Therapy
- Social Service in Health Care
- Surgical Technology

Pertinent articles from the biomedical, management, behavioral science, education, and popular literature are also indexed. More than a dozen journals in the field of health sciences librarianship are covered as well. In addition, CINAHL indexes nursing dissertations and new books from 30 major health care publishers.

All materials are indexed according to CINAHL's Subject Heading List, which is tailor-made for nursing and allied health. Each year terms are added as needed to provide immediate and direct access to indexed materials. The structure of this thesaurus is based on the widely used National Library of Medicine's Medical Subject Headings (MeSH).

ELECTRONIC INDEXES

CINAHL is available as an online database via database vendors BRS, Data-Star, and DIALOG. Indexing from 1983 to the present is available in this format, as are abstracts from more than 100 nursing and allied health journals. User-friendly search services for health professionals are available through BRS, DIALOG, and via gateway services and front-end software. CINAHL is also available on CD-ROM through CD-PLUS, Compact Cambridge, and SilverPlatter Information.

SEARCHING CINAHL EFFECTIVELY

SUBJECT SEARCHING

The CINAHL Subject Headings (or "yellow pages") is the key to effective searching. It includes all valid subject headings and cross references arranged in alphabetic, tree structure, and permuted formats. The first step in every subject search should be to identify the most appropriate heading(s) from this list.

Alphabetic Section

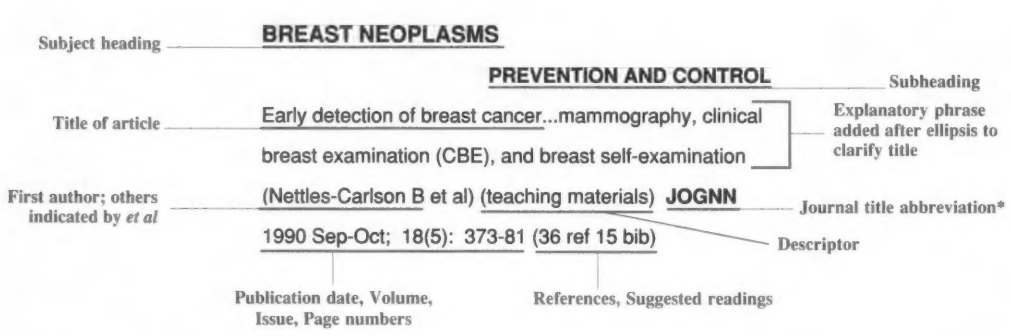
Start with the Alphabetic List of the "yellow pages." Look up your topic to see if it is a valid heading. (Valid headings will appear in all capitals.) If it is not, a "see" reference may lead you to the appropriate heading for your topic. For example, when you look up Cancer, a cross reference "see NEOPLASMS" tells you that articles on this topic appear under the valid heading NEOPLASMS, not under Cancer.

Once you've identified a valid heading, look it up in the Alphabetic Section to make sure it is the most appropriate heading for your search. Scope notes and indexing notes clarify the usage of many subject headings. "See also" references suggest additional related headings that might be useful. When you look up NEOPLASMS, you will find an indexing note to the effect that ANTINEOPLASTIC AGENTS is often used together with NEOPLASMS—drug therapy. A "see also" PRECANCEROUS CONDITIONS reminds you to consider that heading as well.

Tree Structures

Careful use of the Tree Structures can also help you to select the most appropriate heading(s). The Tree Structures list all CINAHL headings in a subject hierarchy which shows the relationship between broader and narrower terms.

Alphanumeric codes ("tree numbers") from the Alphabetic List guide you to the appropriate tree (C4 for NEOPLASMS). Browse the tree to locate the most specific heading(s) related to your topic. This is important since the indexers always assign the most specific subject headings available. If you are looking for articles on BREAST NEOPLASMS, you must search under that heading; relevant articles will not appear also under the general term NEOPLASMS.



Permuted

Consult the Permuted List if you cannot locate an appropriate subject heading in the Alphabetic List. Every significant word appearing in a CINAHL heading or cross reference is listed here alphabetically. It can be a very powerful tool when only one word of a heading is known.

Searching the White Pages

Once you have identified all of the appropriate subject headings for your search, it is time to turn to the white pages of the index. Journal articles, new books, and dissertations are listed in separate sections. In each case, subject headings appear in alphabetical order with appropriate citations underneath. Citations are further divided by subheadings (e.g., psychosocial factors, therapy, and trends) to group together related articles. Start searching in the most current bimonthlies and work backwards to earlier volumes. Be sure to check the list of subject headings for each year searched. The following diagrams explain bibliographic citations:

Interpreting Citations

Bibliographic citations provide the information needed to locate materials. To find journal articles in a library, make note of the article title, journal title, publication date, volume number, issue number (if any), and pages. To find books, you will need to know the book title, author, publisher, and publication date. And for dissertations, keep a record of the title, author, school attended, and date. The UMI number facilitates dissertation ordering.

Special features of CINAHL's bibliographic citations help you to judge the value of the materials indexed. Explanatory phrases are added to clarify vague titles. Descriptors indicate the form of an item (e.g., editorial, research) or the presence of some special data (e.g., statistics, care plans). The number of references and suggested readings are also included in the citation.

AUTHOR SEARCHING

Authors for journal articles, books, and dissertations are listed in separate sections. They are, however, searched identically. Search author names alphabetically in the white pages. The maximum number of authors listed for each citation is three. Additional authors are indicated by et al. The complete bibliographic citation appears only under the name of the first author, with "see" references for the second and third authors.

SEARCHING for BOOKS and DISSERTATIONS

The last two sections of the white pages list new books and nursing dissertations. These may be searched by subject heading and/or author. (See discussions above.)

ADVANCED NURSING PRACTICE

Nurses who fulfill roles beyond those that require basic educational preparation are practicing at an advanced level. These include nurse practitioners, nurse midwives, nurse anesthetists, and clinical specialists. Nurses in advanced practice include in their range of activities physical assessment, health promotion, prevention of disease, and nursing and medical management of disease. They are usually prepared with a masters' degree in nursing and may be in independent practice or employed by a physician, HMO or hospital.
